For Every Decade, a New Vintage Furniture Store

'50s

Man of the World
108 N. 7th St., nr. Wythe Ave.,
second fl., Williamsburg
718-384-8588

The men's lifestyle magazine's first physical outpost, on the floor above menswear store Gentry, has rare three-bulb floor lamps by Italian artist Angelo Lelli ($20,125) and glass side tables with attached lamps by French designer Jacques Adnet ($8,500).

'60s

Baxter & Liebchen
50 Laight St., nr. Hudson St.
212-431-5050

Andrew Kevelson left his career as a Wall Street IT guy to pursue his hobby as a mid-century-modern Scandinavian-furniture collector; the rare originals range from Hans Wegner daybeds ($3,000) to Kai Kristiansen rosewood dining chairs ($9,600) and have appeared on TV shows (like Mad Men, naturally).

'70s

Adaptations NY
109 Franklin St.,
nr. Greenpoint Ave.,
Greenpoint
347-529-5889

In Greenpoint's growing homewares district, Kyla Burney's pleasantly cluttered storefront offers '70s-California alternatives to first-apartment Ikea furniture, including caramel velvet sofas ($850) and sleek record cabinets ($700).

'80s

Sasha Bikoff New York
459 Washington St., nr. Canal St.; 646-692-9847

Twenty-eight-year-old interior designer Sasha Bikoff's collection of Hermès and Chanel scarves reworked into throw pillows ($1,250) are conversation pieces for Upper East Side yentas and can be tossed on her pink croissant love seats ($12,000).

'90s

Mind Over Matter
165 Greenpoint Ave., nr. Leonard St., Greenpoint
929-295-8746

Tucson transplant Elle-Ditta Sciarrone's "holistic home store," sparsely arranged with mindfully sourced and upcycled pieces, has a southwestern-farmhouse vibe with her '90s rattan coffee tables ($295) and woven place mats ($28).
